Yokohama is located along the Japan's Pacific coastline and roughly 30 minutes from Tokyo by train. The total population of Yokohama is approx. 3.65 million, making the city the second largest in Japan after Tokyo. The small village of Yokohama, with a population of only 600, started to become widely known to the world when its port first opened in 1859. Yokohama boasts a number of tourist attractions, including one of world largest Chinatowns and Sankeien Garden.
