7 - 12 April 2008

Singapore companies are keen to make their presence felt in Vietnam's booming economy – the fastest growing in Asia, after China. Singapore and Vietnam enjoy excellent bilateral relations and strong economic linkages, with Singapore consistently being one of Vietnam's top investors and trading partners. The complementary comparative advantages of both countries have enabled this partnership to grow from strength to strength. Trade between Singapore and the Vietnam rose by 15.4% in 2007 to S$13 billion and exports rose from S$8.7 billion in 2006 to S$9.8 billion in 2007.

Vietnam is also the most attractive destination for investment in production based on a selection of 20 emerging markets in the world based on standards such as production expenses, market scope, taxes, transport costs, import and export tariffs and other risk factors, especially the stock market.
